

MESSAGE OF THE PRESIDENT

OF THE United States to the Two Houses of Congress at the Commencement of the Second Session.

Fellow-Citizens of the Senate and House of Representatives:
After a brief interval the Congress of the United States resumes its constitutional legislative labors. The past session has been marked by the peaceful and successful termination of the war, leaving the calamitous traces upon some portions of our country. Peace, order, tranquility, and civilization have been formally declared to exist throughout the whole of the United States.

In all of the States civil authority has superseded the exercise of arms, and the people, by their voluntary action, have maintained their government in full activity and complete operation. The enforcement of the laws is no longer obstructed in any State by combinations too powerful to be suppressed by the ordinary course of judicial proceedings. The animosities engendered by the war are rapidly yielding to the beneficent influences of our free institutions, and to the kindly effects of unrestricted social and commercial intercourse. An entire restoration of fraternal feeling must be the earnest wish of every patriotic heart; and we will have accomplished our grandest national achievement when forgetting the sad events of the past, and remembering only their instructive lessons, we resume our onward career as a free, prosperous, and united people.

In my message of the 4th of December, 1865, Congress was informed of the measures which had been instituted by the Executive with a view to the gradual restoration of the States in which the insurrection occurred to full civil authority. Provisional Governors had been appointed, Conventions called, Governors elected, Legislatures assembled, and Senators and Representatives chosen. Congress had been convened in full activity and complete operation. The blockade had been removed, custom-houses re-established, and the internal revenue laws put in force. The work of restoration had been commenced, and the national Government, by the enforcement of laws long in abeyance. The blockade had been removed, custom-houses re-established, and the internal revenue laws put in force. The work of restoration had been commenced, and the national Government, by the enforcement of laws long in abeyance.

In the meantime, the Executive Department—no other plan having been proposed by Congress—continued its efforts to restore to the States the rights of self-government, and to the people the rights of citizenship. The restoration of the States to full civil authority, and the admission of her Senators and Representatives, was the first and foremost duty of the Executive. With the advice and consent of the Senate, the necessary orders were appointed, and appropriations made by Congress to carry out the restoration of the States to full civil authority, and the admission of her Senators and Representatives.

I deem it a subject of profound regret that Congress has thus far failed to admit to seats loyal Senators and Representatives from the States whose inhabitants, with the exception of a few, were engaged in the rebellion. Ten States—more than one-fourth of the whole number—remain without representation in the Senate and in the House of Representatives. The House of Representatives is composed of representatives from the States, and the Senate is composed of representatives from the States. The House of Representatives is composed of representatives from the States, and the Senate is composed of representatives from the States.

It is true, it has been assumed that the existence of the States was terminated by the rebellious acts of their inhabitants, and that the insurrection had been suppressed. The States were considered to be considered merely as conquered territories. The Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Departments of the Government have, however, refused to sanction an assumption so incompatible with the nature of our republican system, and with the principles of the Constitution.

During the last fiscal year ending the 30th of June, 1866, the total revenue of the Government was $112,194,747. During that period, however, it was reduced to $106,287,000, the receipts of the year having been $106,287,000, the receipts of the year having been $106,287,000, the receipts of the year having been $106,287,000.

In the admission of Senators and Representatives from all and the States, there can be no just ground for apprehension that persons who are disloyal will be clothed with the powers of legislation; for this could not happen when the Constitution is maintained by a Congress composed of faithful Congressmen. Each House made the "Judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its members." The House of Representatives has the right to refuse to seat any member who is not a citizen of the United States, or who is not a resident of the State in which he claims to represent. The House of Representatives has the right to refuse to seat any member who is not a citizen of the United States, or who is not a resident of the State in which he claims to represent.

inspiring its original strength and symmetry. The interests of the Union are led to be preserved by the revival of fraternal relations, the complete obliteration of our past differences, and the re-inauguration of all the pursuits of peace. Directing our efforts to the early accomplishment of these great ends, let us endeavor to preserve harmony between the co-ordinate Departments of the Government, that each in its proper sphere may cordially co-operate with the other in securing the maintenance of the Constitution, the preservation of the Union, and the perpetuity of our free institutions. ANDREW JOHNSON.

FROM WASHINGTON—Designs of the Radicals.—The South to be kept out of the fold.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4—P. M. Radicalism is wild with triumph. Although checked up in the Senate to-day, it was only a momentary check for forms sake. Every radical measure will pass early in the morning. They are all stripping the President of the appointment and pardoning power. The object avowed is to prevent the restoration of confiscated property. They are determined to leave Mr. Johnson only name without power. Summer to-day gave notice that he would introduce a bill abolishing all governments South, and declaring that the South shall not vote on the constitutional amendment. The bill will no doubt pass.
